About the Artist

As a journalism graduate, I believe my photography draws influence from the field. I photograph as I see the world around me, nothing more. My work is mainly composed of images created during my everyday life of moments that often go unnoticed. From a different perspective, even the most mundane instance can be viewed as something more. I aim to shoot clear and concise images — to simply document the world around me.

I graduated from Rutgers University in 2013 with a Bachelor's degree in journalism and my work has been displayed several times at Alfa Art Gallery since 2012.

When not developing film, I'm normally exploring the state and country on a skateboard.
